SWOC BATTLES SUIT TO BLOCK RAIL PICKETING

Will Ask Cleveland Court To Dismiss Injunction Plea of Three Carriers.

WHITE HOUSE FAILS TO AID

Republic Plant at Monroe, Mich., Prepares To Reopen With Aid of Police.

By The Associated Press

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 8—Temporarily stalled for White House intervention in a Little steel strike, the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee today to fight an injunction while watching maneuvers for a joint peace conference and efforts to reopen a picketed plant.

With the strike nearing the end of the second week and upwards of 50,000 mill hands still idle along the Great lakes sector, attorneys for the SWOC planned to ask federal court at Cleveland to dismiss the petition of three railroads for an injunction to prohibit pickets from blockading rail traffic into struck plants.

The hearing on the SWOC's motion to dismiss was continued until Friday.

It was the first legal test of tactics employed by the union in its militant drive aimed at a complete shutdown in the campaign to gain bargaining contracts with Republic Steel Corp., Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., and Inland Steel Corp.

Plant Plans To Open

With peace fronts "in the fire" here, in Washington and Columbus, Republic's subsidiary in Monroe, Mich., the Newton Steel Co., announced it was prepared to resume manufacturing operations tomorrow with assurances of police protection for its employes.

The Newton move was the first since the strike started to carry out the frequently announced intention of steel makers to resume production as soon as civil authorities would assure that picket lines would not molest employes.

Meanwhile Police Chief Carl Olson at Youngstown ordered pickets to stop carrying clubs and other weapons in the city.

"They must put down their clubs under pain of arrest for carrying dangerous weapons," Chief Olson said.

"I will back up the police chief in this matter," Sheriff Ralph E. Elser said. At the same time, Sheriff Elser disclosed he had sworn 100 special deputies and was housing them in special barracks.

Offers No Apology

"I have no apology for them," he said. "And I can get 10,000 if necessary."

"They have been trying to intimidate my deputies," Sheriff Elser said. "Three houses have been fired. At the same time dozens of women have received calls like this: 'You get your husband out of the mill or he won't come back alive.'

"What people can't do in peace-time when there is no strike, they can't do now."

Efforts by 80 locals affiliated with the SWOC in the Calumet region of Indiana to induce President Roosevelt "to act at once to bring the strike to a peaceful end" brought no immediate success, and strikers still were unaware of what Ohio's Gov. Martin L. Davey had accomplished toward bringing both sides together.

John Owens, Ohio director for the CIO said the governor was trying to arrange a joint conference to end the strike. Comment was declined by the governor, whose activities up to now in conference separately with both union and corporation officials have been

SENATORS APPROVE NEW FLOOD PROGRAM

Proposal Different From One Recommended by Roosevelt Recently.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 8—The senate commerce committee approved today a resolution directing army engineers to submit a "comprehensive national plan" for flood control.

The resolution, introduced by Sen. Conway, Democrat of Arkansas, would set up a flood control program district from the one recently recommended by President Roosevelt in suggesting creation of a series of seven agencies similar to the Tennessee valley authority.

At the same time, the committee authorized its chairman, Sen. Copeland, Democrat of New York, to ask on behalf of the committee for the Norris bill to create the river authorities. The Norris bill was referred to the agriculture committee.

Such a request by Copeland would revive the battle initiated by Sen. Clark, Democrat of Missouri, when the bill was introduced by Sen. Norris, Independent of Nebraska, but later dropped, to have the commerce committee consider the bill instead of the agriculture committee which handled the original TVA bill.

Simple Funeral Rites Prepared For Jean Harlow

Death at Peak of Career Recalls Barbara LaMar, Wallace Reid, Valentino.

(Pictures on Page 11)

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, June 8—Jean Harlow, author of the platinum blond vogue and central figure of marital tragedy, will be buried with simplicity contrasting sharply with one of Hollywood's most spectacular careers.

The 26-year-old movie star died unexpectedly yesterday of uremic poisoning.

Her death, at the height of her success, was reminiscent of that of Barbara La Mar, Wallace Reed, and Rudolph Valentino.

But her mother, Mrs. Jean Bello, and her stepfather, Marino Bello, sought to forestall demonstrations by great throngs of curious persons like those which saw Valentino as he lay in state and which greeted the train that bore his body across the continent.

Private Funeral Tomorrow

Miss Harlow will not lie in state. The coffin will be closed when private funeral services are held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Wee Kirk O' The Heather in Glendale. Arrangements for interment are yet to be made.

"Jean's mother wishes it so," said Bello, divorced from Mrs. Bello two years but united with her in common grief. "She wants Jean to remain in the memory of her fans as she was in life, so the body will not lie in state."

Little warning had been given that the end was near for the girl who did her first screen work in 1928 and shortly was rocketed toward stardom as the platinum blond in "Hell's Angels." She left the set of "Saratoga," in which she was being starred with Clark Gable, last May 29, feeling ill.

She asked then for William Powell, who had been her closest friend for two years. Her illness was first reported as gall bladder trouble, then as a cold. She was removed to a hospital Sunday, without the fact becoming generally known, and died there yesterday.

"Why did this have to be?" cried Powell, who was with her at death.

BIG GUNS AND TROOPS STORM MADRID ANEW

Rebel Shells Send Madrilenos Scurrying While Infantry Launches Attack.

By The Associated Press

MADRID, June 8 — Insurgent shells screeched into Madrid at 10-second intervals in a one hour bombardment today while besieging troops fought futilely to take a greater slice of suburban territory in the southwestern Carabanchel sector.

Shattering the lull left by a day in which not a shot was heard on the capital front, the thunder of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's batteries tumbled the Madrilenos from their beds and into underground places of safety.

Screams of fearful women and children accompanied the din of whining, exploding shells. The cannonading started shortly after midnight, timed to aid an infantry thrust in Carabanchel, the former workingmen's suburb.

Capital defence forced hammered the insurgents back into their trenches, however.

The artillery attack was one of the heaviest since the siege of Madrid began last Nov. 6.

MAYOR SMITH ACTS TO FILE FOR NEW TERM

Starts Ball Rolling for Municipal Campaign; Filing Deadline Friday.

DEMOCRATS TO MEET

Party Committee Will Confer With Prospective Candidates Tonight.

Mayor Frederick C. Smith yesterday took out papers for his second term candidacy, thus starting the political ball rolling for the municipal campaign next fall.

In the meantime, Democratic party organization officials looked over the field for mayoralty material to head their ticket.

Interest in the political situation grew hourly in view of the fact Friday at 6:30 p. m. is the deadline for filing declarations of candidacy for the Aug. 10 primary.

Mayor Smith, preparing to file his declaration of candidacy Wednesday, said in a brief statement to a reporter today he will become a candidate to "seek an opportunity to finish the work still to be done."

Meeting Tonight

Meanwhile, the Democratic central committee prepared to meet tonight in party headquarters at the call of the chairman, Dr. C. J. Altmaier. The chairman said tonight's informal session will give prospective candidates an opportunity to present themselves and possibly enable a number of possible candidates to determine definitely whether they will file.

"It's entirely up to the individual, of course, but the committee feels that perhaps a number of persons who otherwise might not have become candidates will want to file if they have an opportunity to sit in with the committee and talk over their plans," Dr. Altmaier said.

In Republican organization circles Bud H. Lawson, chairman of the Marion County Republican central and executive committees, said he has made inquiry among prospective candidates and that a full slate of Republican candidates is indicated.

Seek Renomination

Mayor Smith, Council President R. C. Snare, Solicitor Ralph E. Carhart, Treasurer Sherman Baldeman and Councilmen D. R. Bigart, U. F. Zachman, William A. Shuster, Hayes Rogers and Welcome P. Case Jr. are planning to seek renomination, Mr. Lawson said. Councilmen Harry Cahill and Robert H. Stief, both Republicans, remained uncertain about their plans today, he said.

Earl Johnson, a carpenter and contractor living at 350 Monroe street, is preparing to seek the Second Ward Republican nomination, Mr. Lawson said. Henry H. Dawson of 700 Merkel avenue yesterday filed his petition with the county board of elections seeking the Republican nomination from the Third ward.

J. L. Wilkins, Republican, has announced his candidacy for the nomination for council-at-large.

Only three persons had filed declarations of candidacy with the board of elections up to noon today. They are City Solicitor Carhart, Mr. Dawson and Michael J. Pfeiffer, a Steam Shovel Co. machinist, seeking the Democratic nomination for Second ward council. He lives at 360 Lee street.

FAMED BOTANIST ON PROGRAM AT O. W. U.

Dr. Paul B. Sears, Former Bucyrus Man, Will Address Alumni Congress June 12.

By The Associated Press

DELAWARE, O., June 8—Dr. Paul B. Sears, nationally-known botanist, of the University of Oklahoma, will return to his alma mater, Ohio Wesleyan university, here Saturday afternoon, June 12, to speak at the alumni congress.

A native of Bucyrus, Dr. Sears recently attained considerable recognition for his book "Deserts on the March," which won him a $2,500 fellowship. Four such awards were made by a jury of 30 authors and literary critics to authors whose work, in the opinion of the jury, deserved wider recognition from American readers than they had received.

"Deserts on the March" deals with dust storms and floods, and does it so dramatically that the book won the award on its literary quality alone. In addition, it sticks to scientific fact, the jury claimed.

When the United States was pushing its way into the west, the movement popularly was called "the winning of the west." Because of the danger of dust storms and floods in this same area, Dr. Sears will talk on "The Losing of the West." The congress will be held in Gray chapel annex, and will be open to the public without charge.

City Athletic Center At Stadium Proposed

Plan for Summer Program for Children and Adults Placed Before School Board.

Possibility that the high school stadium and athletic field may be used this summer and succeeding summers as a citywide playground and physical education center was seen yesterday as the board of education took under consideration such a proposal from officials of the Y. M. C. A. After considerable discussion of the merits and possible disadvantages of such a program, the board decided to meet with representatives of the Y. M. C. A. on the field to discuss the matter.

The proposal was made by George D. Hildebrandt of 504 South State street, chairman of a special Y. M. C. A. committee to map out an outdoor program. Mr. Hildebrandt made his formal proposal by letter but prior to the board's meeting yesterday had interviewed all the members.

Mr. Hildebrandt's plan contemplates an extensive recreational and educational program for children, men and women to be worked out as time and money permits.

On the football field there would be badminton, volley ball for men and women, tag games, calisthenics and other group sports. He points out that the entire program would be under competent supervision which would prevent any damage to the sod or to any other part of the property. Three trained recreational supervisors are available through WPA, he said.

Develop Diamonds, Courts

To the north of the enclosed part of the grounds are two baseball diamonds and tennis courts which were laid out by the original engineers but never developed. These would be built up for use also, Mr. Hildebrandt said.

In time it is hoped sufficient public interest might be worked up to warrant bringing health speakers to the stadium for public lectures. Band concerts are also possible, he said.

The board in an informal discussion centered its objections around the possibility of damage to the sod which was carefully designed for football use. Mr. Hildebrandt, who for many years was athletic director of the Marion Y. M. C. A. and was active in similar work in Detroit, said his experience shows that properly supervised recreation will not hurt a playing field. He said with frequent watering of the field, the grass will not be harmed.

The board also questioned the advisability of erecting courts on the playing field—for volleyball or badminton.

The Y. M. C. A. would have to pay the costs of water for the field and shower, gas for heating water, the board agreed. The board is considering purchasing a new pump for water. They favored use of the cinder track which becomes better with use.

No date was set by the board for its meeting with Y. M. C. A. officials.

Three additional teachers were rehired by the board: L. H. Rieker as coordinator for the vocational department for a period of 11 months beginning July 1; R. A. Todd for 10 months beginning July 1 for printing and drawing; L. H. Nason for 11 months beginning July 1 for shop and shop mathematics. The men do considerable shop work in the summer months at the school.

Bills totaling $4,369.11, including supplies ordered for next year, were approved and paid.

Painting Program

Supt. C. A. Hudson was authorized to proceed with a painting program, chiefly for the interiors of Mark and North Main street schools, and the exterior woodwork of Edison and Mark street schools and any others that are in need. On the basis of bids submitted from six paint companies Mr. Hudson was advised to purchase from the lowest bidder in each of several classes of paint and supplies. The Marion Paint Co. bid lowest on the majority of the divisions.

The board also authorized plans for correction of lighting in the gymnasium at Oakland Heights school and elsewhere as needed.

For the annual summer repair program for seats and desks Jean E. Beer, manual arts instructor at Central Junior High school, will be employed. A thorough sanding of the marred desks and seats and general repair work is planned.

STATE PATROL HUNTS BANDITS

Men From Marion Station in Search After North Baltimore Holdup.

CAPTURE ALMOST MADE

Trail of Quartet Fleeing With $6,500 Lost Near Mt. Blanchard.

State highway patrolmen from the Marion sub-station were called into the northwestern Ohio search yesterday afternoon for four bandits who took $6,500 from the First National bank at North Baltimore.

A patrol car was within sight of the fleeing robbers when the pursuing machine developed motor trouble and lost the trail near Mt. Blanchard, it was reported by The Associated Press. One of the patrol cars dispatched from the Marion sub-station was detailed west of the city and the other was sent to the Upper Sandusky and Carey district.

Patrolmen D. D. Nicholas, D. L. Callentine and H. H. Wilson, members of the sub-station staff here, participated in the hunt. While the entire patrol force was called out on the search, Marion police officers stood by at the radio to handle messages directed to the sub-station here.

According to accounts of the holdup, Atty. Oscar L. Fleckner of North Baltimore saw it in progress and called the patrol. In their haste to make a get away the bandits dropped bags containing $900.

LONDON SOCIETY GIRL BELIEVED ABDUCTED

Fiance, Michael Asquith, Reveals Note Threatening "To Remove" British Beauty.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 8—Fears that blond "Didi" Battye might have been abducted were raised today after her fiance disclosed he had received a note threatening to "remove" the missing society beauty.

High officials of Scotland Yard took personal charge of the far-flung search and issued instructions to watch every port and airfield in the country.

The fiance, Michael Asquith, son of the Hon. Herbert and Lady Cynthia Asquith, was expected to interrupt his final examination for an Oxford degree to come to London and tell Yard officials about the letter.

The message was received by young Asquith, whose father is heir presumptive to the Earl of Oxford and Asquith, before the disappearance of the former photographer's model June 1 from the London home of her childhood friend, Viscountess Long.

The letter mysteriously warned Asquith:

"Unless you take better care of Miss Battye she will be removed."

HUNGRY BURGLARS

Thieves Enter Two Houses, Help Selves To Eats.

Intruders last night helped themselves to eats and drinks at two Marion homes, according to police reports. The George Cronley residence at 478 Oney avenue was entered while members of the family were not at home, and three bottles of beer and a dish of strawberries were taken from the refrigerator. At the home of Mrs. Elmer Smith at 587 Miami street intruders took a cake, two loaves of bread, a quart of milk and some sliced bacon. No one was at home. Both thefts occurred before 11:30 o'clock and the value of the loot was estimated at $2. Entrance to the Cronley home was gained through the basement while it was not learned how the intruders entered the Smith residence.

HOLIDAY GRIPS LANSING AGAIN

A. F. of L. Calls All Construction Workers Out as Membership Drive Starts.

PUBLIC PROJECTS HALTED

Charges Against CIO Pickets Arrested Previously Will Be Pressed in Court.

By The Associated Press

LANSING, Mich., June 8—Another one-day "labor holiday" in Michigan's state capital city halted building operations today.

The new "holiday" called by unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to signal the start of an organizing campaign, pulled bricklayers, plasterers, painters, plumbers and electricians away from buildings under construction here.

Yesterday, the United Automobile Workers of America, CIO affiliate, called its members from work in a city-wide demonstration that neared the proportions of a general strike in protest against arrest of eight pickets.

Projects Tied Up

Spokesmen for the building tradesmen declared today's holiday had tied up "every city and state project as well as private building in the city."

Prosecutor Thomas J. Bailey, who prepared misdemeanor charges against five of eight pickets whose arrest precipitated yesterday's holiday, said today he was prepared to press the charges in justice court in Mason tomorrow.

"Their cases will be handled the same as any others on the docket," he said.

Yesterday's vast demonstration, which centered about the front lawn of the state Capitol, passed off with no more violence than a college hazing.

And a college hazing was the very

REPUBLIC DEMANDS REOPENING OF MAILS

Declares Legal Action Will Be Taken Unless Farley Orders Shipments Sent.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 8—The Republic Steel Corp., asserting it was denied use of the mails for sending food to its workers in strike-besieged plants, advised Postmaster General Farley today it would take legal action unless the mails were opened to it.

The corporation, through John S. Brooker, Jr., official and counsel, made formal demand upon Farley to issue orders to the postmasters at Niles and at Warren (Ohio), respectively to accept for delivery and deliver all matter submitted for mailing to addresses at the plants of the company at those places.

Brookes reiterated earlier Republic charges that union representatives of the strikers were permitted to examine packages submitted for delivery to the company plants.

He said it was understood "only those packages which met with the approval of such representatives were accepted or delivered."

"We are informed," he added, "that daily newspapers have been refused under similar circumstances."

KARL BUSHONG DIES IN GENEVA

State Highway Patrol Member Here Until Jan. 1 Fatally Hurt.

FIFTH TO DIE IN SERVICE

First Word of Death Received Here by Radio; Flags Ordered Lowered.

Karl Bushong, 42, state highway patrolman who was located at the Marion substation from June 25, 1930, until Jan. 1 this year, was injured fatally in an automobile collision two miles east of Geneva, O., yesterday afternoon.

Bushong was a passenger in an automobile with Richard Osborne, 21, of Orwell, O., near Geneva when Osborne attempted to pass a truck and collided with another automobile driven by Fred Grummes of Newport, Conn., the patrol substation at Geneva reported today.

The accident happened shortly after noon and Bushong died of a punctured lung, head bruises and internal injuries about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Community hospital at Geneva. He was the only person seriously hurt in the crash, Osborne and Mr. and Mrs. Grummes suffered minor injuries.

First word of Bushong's death was received here last night over the police radio, which carried a brief announcement of his death and instructions for all substations in Ohio to lower their flags to half-mast in memory of Bushong.

Fifth to Die in Service

He was the fifth state highway patrolman to die in service since the patrol was established in November of 1933, records at the state headquarters in Columbus show.

State highway officials said a delegation of possibly 25 patrolmen will be sent to the funeral services, which are to be held in Cleveland at a time to be fixed later. Among them will be a number of patrolmen with whom Bushong served at various points in the state. None of the patrolmen who were stationed at Marion when he was located here are still on duty at the Marion substation, but it is expected some of the patrolmen here will be instructed to attend the funeral.

Bushong came to Marion on June 25, 1930, from Cambridge and left Marion to go to Findlay where he served a short time before going to Geneva substation on Feb. 18.

One of the original members of the patrol when it was established in 1933, Bushong served the patrol in an executive capacity for nine months in 1934 as captain of one of the two districts into which the state was divided at that time. His office then was in Columbus.

Served in Delaware

At other times, he served as patrolman at Delaware, Columbus, Springfield and London bureau of identification.

Patrol records show Bushong attended the University of Illinois for two and one-half years and that he served two and one-half years in the United States Marines air squad. Records show he saw World war service as an aviator.

He was born at Augusta, Ill., on Feb. 18, 1897. Records of the patrol office at Columbus show his mother, Mrs. Annabel Blackmer of Chicago, Ill.; his widow, Mrs. Mary Bushong, and a 16-year-old son, both of Cleveland, as the survivors. His home was in Cleveland, and Mrs. Bushong and the son remained there while he served at various points in the state.

The Geneva substation today was making an investigation of the circumstances of the crash. Bushong was on duty at the time and it is believed the pair was looking for a missing automobile.

BRITAIN OFFERS NEW SETUP FOR FASCISTS

Would Extend Neutral Shipping Zones and Get Assurances Against Attacks.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 8—Great Britain offered a three-point proposal today to induce Germany and Italy back into the non-intervention committee and to safeguard Europe from the chaos that might spread from a new "incident" in the Spanish civil war.

Great Britain proposed:

1. Extension of safety zones for neutral shipping and warships in the neutrality fleet patrolling Spain.

2. Assurances from both sides of the Spanish conflict to abstain from provocations such as the recent Spanish government aerial bombardment of the German pocket battleship Deutschland, a neutrality patrol vessel, in Ibiza harbor.

3. An arrangement, in the event the first two measures fail to bring Italo-German agreement, to bring the matter up for consultation by all four powers engaged in the patrol—Britain, France, Germany and Italy—to consider necessary action.

Mercury Above Average Here in Last Month

Temperatures averaged 1 71 degrees above the mean of 60 degrees and rainfall was 2 of an inch under the average of 3 61 inches Both averages are those given by the state weather bureau for Marion county, based on compilations over a period of years

The last day of the month Monday following Decoration day saw the mercury soar to 92 highest reading so far in the month The Decoration day maximum of 85 and the above 90 temperature the following day gave holiday observers one of the hottest Memorial day vacations in years

Records of Observer E F Patterperger show that the 92 on the thirty-first while it was the high for the season was to conversation fodder for those who recall May of 1911 when the all-time maximum of 101 degrees was set

May nights were uniformly comfortable with readings below the 40-degree mark on only four nights the majority being in the 50's and 60's The lowest reading during the 31 nights was 35 on the sixth considerably below the record minimum of 26 set in 1900

Rainfall deficiency in May was not as great as in preceding months amounting to only 2 of an inch under the 3 61 inches average

There have been years in Marion's weather history when traces of snow fell but May of 1913 was the last time it happened

MARION YOUTH HELD

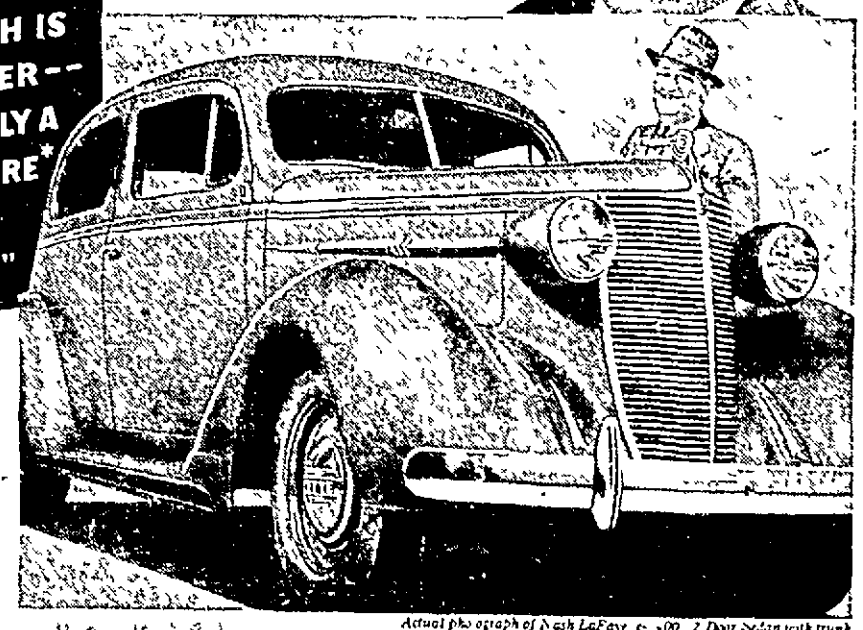
"OUR NEW NASH IS SO MUCH BIGGER—AND IT COST ONLY A FEW DOLLARS MORE* THAN THOSE SMALLER CARS"



Actual photograph of Nash LaFayette "400" 2 Door Sedan with trunk

We'd like to thank Mr. E. Hovel of Chicago for the following expression...read what he says!

"Lots of people take their automobiles for granted But not me I want to know what's under the hood I'd like to pay Nash this compliment—the Nash LaFayette "400" is one of the best engineered cars today That "400" engine is a 'sweetheart': Those LARGER hydraulic brakes will save me many a dented fender That big roomy body is a joy to our whole family! I'm proud of my new Nash...it's a grand automobile!"

We hope that some of you people will look at the Nash LaFayette "400". It's a great big 117-inch wheelbase car. You get a remarkably economical 90 horsepower six cylinder engine You get larger hydraulic brakes, stronger all steel body More room. More comfort Come in Let us show you all the extra value Nash offers—for just a few dollars more than those "All Three" cars cost.

See the new Nash Ambassador Sixes and Eights Thrillingly beautiful Impostingly big We honestly believe that the Nash Ambassador models offer you every important advantage of the most expensive cars made—at an amazingly low price. *FOR AS LITTLE AS $1 OR $2 A MONTH EXTRA you can get out of the "All Three" class. A check up recently made in ten representative cities shows that the Nash LaFayette "400" 4 Door Sedan with trunk DELIVERS for just a FEW dollars more than the similarly equipped 4 Door sedans of the "All Three" small cars. Gas Refrigeration Satisfies For Years Longer

Isn't it logical to believe that a refrigerator having no moving parts in its freezing system will give many more years of trouble-free, noiseless service than one that operates with motors, belts and pulleys? A tiny gas flame alone operates the Servel Electrolux—maintaining uniform cold, freezing ice cubes silently and as simply as nature itself. BY ADELE GARRISON

Boys Tell Madge and Dicky About Fight In Boat

"AND NOW," Dicky said when we were all assembled upon the veranda, with the four boys arrayed in dry clothing and drinking glasses of hot milk which I had hurriedly provided for them, "let's get to the bottom of this. Bill, you're the eldest. Suppose you tell us what happened, and Hank can help you out if you forget anything. Then we'll give the youngsters a chance to be heard."

But there was no belligerent protest left in Junior and Roderick. They were meek to the point of abasement. Either their soaking in the lake, or Dicky's first aid treatment had taken all the desire for combat or even for explanation out of them. They did not even look up at Dicky's promise, but kept their eyes fixed upon the ground in such hopeless dolor that I felt my heart treacherously inclining to them, although I was pretty sure that they had been wholly at fault in whatever had happened.

"It won't take long," Bill said grimly. "You know how often you have warned us, Uncle Dicky, never to move around in a boat."

"Yes, yes, of course," Dicky said, suddenly alert. "Do you mean to tell me these two," he indicated Junior and Roderick with what I knew was a purposeful gesture of contempt, "were disobeying that command?"

In Argument

"I'll tell the world they were," Bill said. "Hank and I were fishing a little way off from them"—loyally he did not divulge that he and his brother were watching over the smaller boys at my special request—"and we heard them slanging each other as if they had a good mad on.

"They kept getting louder and fiercer, and we thought we'd better get over near them. But before we got there, those two little fools stood up in the boat and began to fist each other all over the place."

He stopped as if for breath, and Hank took up the saga.

"You can bet Bill and I were scared stiff," he said. "We yelled at 'em to sit down, but they either didn't hear us or were too mad to pay any attention to us. They kept right on hitting each other, and before Bill and I could get there, the boat tipped and sent 'em both into the water."

Dicky Halts Story

An uncontrollable shudder ran over me, for my imagination was vividly drawing a picture of what might have been the result of that roll of the boat.

"Did either of them hit a rock anywhere?" Dicky asked quickly. "The water's full of them along where they were fishing."

"I don't think so," Bill answered. "But I couldn't be sure. I'll tell you why we didn't ask 'em in a minute."

"Just a second," Dicky's uplifted hand halted the revelation. "Junior, Roderick!" he said, and his voice held the quality of a whiplash.

"Yes, dad!"

"Yes, uncle Dicky!"

The two small boys lifted miserable eyes to their stern interlocutor, who, I guessed, was as soft-hearted toward them behind his grim mask as I was.

"Did you hit yourselves anywhere, either of you?"

I noticed that the boys did not look at each other as they usually do when questioned about petty misdemeanors. The belligerency had been soaked out of them, but plainly the bitterness remained.

"I didn't feel anything hit me," Junior said. "But my shin kinda aches."

"And my right arm," Roderick supplemented.

"Come here," Dicky commanded, and with experienced hands went over their arms and legs. Both boys winced once or twice, but Dicky looked at me reassuringly when he had finished the examination.

"Perfectly all right," he said, "by a miracle, of course. It's a wonder they didn't hit their heads. Go on, Bill. How did you ever get them out?"

YOUTH IS SENTENCED IN CUTTING SCRAPE

Charles Walker, colored, 19, of Fleetwood street and Grand avenue, pleaded guilty at an arraignment in municipal court yesterday to a charge of assault and battery. He was given a 60-day sentence to the county jail and assessed the costs of prosecution by Municipal Judge Martin.

The charge was in connection with the knife attack on W. E. Dickerson, 60, of Dixon, Tenn., May 16, at a Bryant street residence. Walker was taken into custody yesterday when police found him working at an uptown garage.

The newly-elected lodge head will name his committees and chairman, and installation ceremonies will be held in July. One application was received and one balloted on. Work in the initiatory degree was conferred on one candidate.

"ALL-BRAN LIVES UP TO REPUTATION"

If you are troubled with common constipation, read Miss Bundy's enthusiastic letter:

"I used to feel poorly all the time—just down and out. After reading an advertisement about ALL-BRAN, I got a box. It has helped me ever since." Miss Mary Bundy, Bennettsville, S. C.

Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brings "bulk" to exercise the intestines; vitamin B to tone up the intestinal tract.

Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water. This soft mass gently clears the intestines in a safe, natural way—without any of the weakening action of pills and drugs.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—with every meal in severe cases. Serve as a cereal with milk or fruits, or cook into recipes. Remember—ALL-BRAN is a food—not a medicine. You buy it at the grocery store. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

$30,000 DAMAGE SUIT ON TRIAL HERE TODAY

Dale Orr Seeks Judgment for Injures in Fall from Ladder.

Trial of the $30,000 damage suit of Dale Orr against Miss Kathryn Burke of 1133 East Church street opened this morning before a common pleas court jury and Judge Hector S. Young. Mr. Orr, who resides at 616 North State street, is suing for injuries suffered when his ladder was knocked out from under him by the defendant in her automobile as he was painting the house of a neighbor.

Following selection of the jury and opening statements of attorneys, D. R. Ours, a surveyor, was called to the stand by the plaintiff and displayed maps of the property, describing the location of the accident and the boundary lines between the Burke property and the neighbor's.

The defendant, represented by W. P. McConey, asserts that Orr had placed the ladder in her driveway without permission and that he was trespassing. The home being painted belongs to Ellsworth Vorhees and is located at 1151 East Church street. Mrs. Vorhees also testified for the plaintiff this morning.

The plaintiff was placed on the stand and had completed his own testimony at noon recess. He described the ladder and admitted he had not asked permission to place the foot of it on the Burke drive. His attorneys, Z. P. Davis and W. Dexter Hazen, said they will call Dr. J. A. Dold and Dr. F. V. Murphy to testify regarding the plaintiff's injuries this afternoon and that their case probably will be completed today.

Orr claims in his petition that Miss Burke backed her car out of her garage, knowing that his ladder was in the drive. He said he fell 28 feet from the top of the ladder to the ground, suffering a broken arm, four teeth knocked out, nervous shock and other permanent injuries which have deprived him of his livelihood.

The defendant in her answer has denied all the allegations of the plaintiff other than that she struck the ladder.

PENNY SHARES TOTAL $1,435

Epworth Committee Highly Pleased With Unique Financial Campaign.

"Penny Shares" payments at Epworth M. E. church Sunday brought in $1,435.14, the special committee in charge of the unique money-raising campaign announced today.

The payments exceeded by $376.34 the normal expected returns from first quarter payments on the 1,160 shares sold for $3.65 each, payable in one year.

Returns not only should be highly gratifying to the Epworth congregation, but should be taken as an "it can be done" proof by churches engaged in financial campaigns, members of the committee said today.

Money sacks two feet deep and two feet wide covered 10 feet of space along the platform Sunday morning. As families went to the altar with their payments, leaders of the 12 circles of the General Aid society were inside the altar rail to receive the money sacks, which were handed to Gilmore Hiett, chairman of the committee, and stacked along the platform. As the sacks were presented, others were handed out to hold payments until the semi-annual collection is made.

Six hundred and seventeen money bags were turned in, containing a total of $972.26 which, with $462.88 received in payments made prior to the service, brought the first quarter's total to $1,435.14.

Seven women worked from 8:30 a. m. until 3:30 p. m. yesterday, to compile the report. In addition to counting the money, they handled $200.00 in checks.

No little part of the time was spent in counting 26,461 pennies. The payments included $264 in currency, 145 half-dollars, 263 quarters, 607 dimes and 629 nickels.

The counting was done by Mrs. Earl T. Smart, Mrs. J. E. Oliphant, Mrs. A. W. Kelte, Mrs. James Turner, Mrs. Adah Gracely, Mrs. Howard Swink and Mrs. E. J. Schoenlaub, treasurer of the special fund committee.

CHANGES PLEA ON INDICTMENT TODAY

Joseph Burgle, 47, of near Marion, indicted by the grand jury last week on a charge of driving an automobile without permission of the owner, changed his plea to guilty today before Common Pleas Judge Hector S. Young and was placed on a year's probation. Sentencing was suspended.

Burgle, accused of taking the car of Raymond Brown of 210 Lake street last month, had pleaded innocent at his arraignment Saturday. He was one of two men indicted by the grand jury. Edward Spohn was attorney for Burgle.

More Than Pleasure.

Petulant criticism of the supreme court for taking its customary summer recess has proved to be another boomerang in President Roosevelt's hands. Like his sermon on tax morality, it is sailing back at him more rapidly than he threw it at the intended victims.

For many years the public has held the attitude that the presidency, being an unnaturally difficult task, should be lightened by numerous vacations. Mr. Roosevelt, more than most of his predecessors, has demonstrated ability to conserve his strength by relaxing away from his executive desk.

He has not incurred criticism for his numerous and long vacations. His countrymen have believed it was in their interest that he should do what he thought his health and his composure required him to do. They feel the same way about the members of the supreme court, who also are subject to fatigue.

While the subject of vacations is open for comment, furthermore, it might be mentioned that time spent away from the job is being regarded increasingly as something more than mere pleasure. Experience proves it also is preparation for better work when the vacation is over. Certainly in a civilization which is talking about a 30-hour week and which already considers 40 hours a week to be a reasonable working period, there can be no honest quarrel over the belief that men whose jobs require sustained mental effort are as deserving of leisure time as men who work with their hands.

Not Very Satisfactory.

The Dizzy Dean showdown with Ford Frick, National League president, must have left that former newspaperman biting his nails.

Proceedings turned necessarily on the point of whether or not the great right hander was quoted correctly in the press. When he denied certain statements attributed to him, there seemed nothing for PPresident Frick to do but to reinstate him. The written apology which was to have squared everything was not obtained.

As top official in the National league, President Frick possibly is satisfied with the outcome. As a former newspaperman, who probably knows all about how slippery customers charge misquotation when they don't want to eat their words, he must be deeply disappointed.

General Mola.

Gen. Emilio Mola, killed in an accident while flying in one of the airplanes he admired so much as a modern military weapon, was a powerful individual in the Spanish civil war—on the rebel side.

Gen. Mola stood only slightly below Gen. Franco in importance. He was an able soldier and an excellent statesman. He would have been a power under the kind of military dictatorship he was fighting to establish.

It had been his duty recently to terrorize the Basques. The role was not new to him. Years ago he was called "the most hated man in Spain." He dealt with human beings as some human beings deal with animals—on a strict command-and-obey basis.

Gen. Mola was seeking power as he saw fit—by fighting for it. That is the prevailing custom in Spain these days. The military dictatorship he wanted to establish probably does not differ essentially from the proletarian dictatorship the loyalists say they are trying to establish.

His death is interesting as an indication that even in war-torn Spain there still is a kind of justice—a kind which throws a general into a hillside in an airplane whose bombs had been throwing helpless victims into the walls of their houses.

A Line.

A few months ago when Paul V. McNutt visited Washington before going to his new job as Philippine commissioner the country had its first good look at the man who intends to start running for the next Democratic presidential nomination in another year or so.

It saw a good looking man with a clean-cut face and a general appearance of bristling energy. Here, said the experts, was a political comer. As high commissioner of the Philippines, he would be in a favorite proving ground for presidential material. William Howard Taft jumped from Manila to the White House. Gen. Leonard Wood almost made it. Frank Murphy, McNutt's predecessor, was supposed to be heading in that direction, too.

Murphy, now governor of Michigan, had a quiet term as high commissioner. McNutt, former governor of Indiana, hadn't been there long enough to get his trunks unpacked before he had started a row about precedence. He insisted, properly, that he outranked the president of the Philippines. The state department said nothing, but privately advised the new commissioner that his predecessor had handled the same thing more tactfully by keeping his mouth shut.

In 1937, such things aren't important. In 1940, they may become very important. The country is getting a line on its political timber for tomorrow.

Bad Example Set

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1937, by The Marion Star

WASHINGTON, June 8—The breath of scandal—the first to be charged in more than four years of its official career—has come to the Roosevelt administration.

The scandal touches the possible violation of the federal corrupt practices act through the sale to corporations of political handbooks autographed by President Roosevelt, the proceeds being used to retire the Democratic national committee's deficit.

Maybe what the Democratic national committee has done is legal and is only an avoidance of the "spirit" of the law," as the phrase was used last week by the President when he sent a special message to congress denouncing lawyers and taxpayers who think up "clever little schemes" to get around the law.

But whether the device used to circumvent the federal corrupt practices act is or is not legal is something for the courts to determine. Representative Snell, minority leader, has begun an inquiry to determine whether a congressional investigation should be authorized by the house, but if the facts are as set forth in the evidence possessed by Mr. Snell, then the question is one for a grand jury and not a congressional committee.

Confronted by a somewhat similar problem in connection with the Teapot Dome scandal, President Coolidge did not entrust the subject to the department of justice, but appointed two special prosecutors, a Republican and a Democrat, Owen Roberts—now a supreme court justice—and former Senator Atlee Pomerene of Ohio, and gave them word to go ahead and sift the matter to the bottom, whether it led to criminal or civil prosecutions.

Here are the facts and also a paragraph from the law, so the average person can determine for himself whether, to use the President's own language in discussing law avoidance, "the decency of American morals is involved."

Letter of Appreciation

First, there is a letter written on the stationery of the Democratic national committee and signed by one of its representatives, which letter was written in the year 1937 and addressed to a certain corporation:

"I took great pleasure in reporting my telephone conversation with you today to Mr. Farley and I want to assure you that all of us here will deeply appreciate your help at this time in clearing up our deficit.

"I am enclosing the contract for four books and would appreciate your signing and forwarding it with your check for $1,000 in the enclosed envelope.

"We are using this book as a means of clearing up the deficit and the President has made his contribution by individually autographing each of the volumes.

"The sale of the book enables us to legally accept corporation checks and this is the way all of the companies who are assisting us are handling these expenditures."

Many corporations have bought the books, which are merely the same book that was issued at the last Democratic national convention, but with a de luxe binding and with the autograph of the President on them. The contract with the purchasers provides that "the subscriber may turn over to the Democratic national committee such books as he does not desire for distribution by them as they see fit."

The foregoing provision made it possible to sell the same books more than once and thus get in more money. Now, the books themselves are clearly articles of some value, and yet corporations are forbidden to give contributions and political committees are prohibited from receiving contributions. Here is the way Section 241 of the federal corrupt practices act reads, under the heading "definitions":

"The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit, of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable to make a contribution."

Then there is another part of the federal corrupt practices act namely Section 251, which says:

"It is unlawful for any national bank, or any corporation organized by authority of any law of congress, to make a contribution in connection with any election to any political office, or for any corporation whatever to make a contribution in connection with any election at which presidential and vice presidential electors or a senator or representative in, or a delegate or resident commissioner to, congress are to be voted for, or for any candidate, political committee, or other person to accept or receive any contribution prohibited by this section.

Penalty Is Heavy

"Every corporation which makes any contribution in violation of this section shall be fined not more than $5,000; and every officer or director of any corporation who consents to any contribution by the corporation in violation of this section shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both."

The penalties for persons other than corporation officers, namely members of political committees, are set forth in Section 252 as follows:

"Any person who violates any of the foregoing provisions of this chapter, except those for which a specific penalty is imposed by Section 208 of Title 18, and Section 251 of this title, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both."

Now it may well be that the corporations themselves in all cases did not buy the books, but that individuals did. On the records of the clerk of the house of representatives, along with other receipts listed by the Democratic national committee since last election, are the names of several corporations and the amounts they paid for the books in question.

There is another possible evasion or avoidance that possibly will be brought forward, namely that the money was not given for the purpose of electing a president or vice president or members of congress, since the contributions were actually made after the election occurred. The fact that the funds are openly conceded to be for the purpose of retiring a deficit incurred by the Democrats during the campaign may or may not be a factor for the courts to determine when they seek to learn whether the money is a "contribution" in the sense in which the term is used in the federal corrupt practices act. But if it isn't an illegal step, it certainly comes under the head of avoidance, and there seems no doubt either that the President of the United States was well aware of the general nature of the scheme because he helped

It Sounds Fishy

By PRESTON GROVER.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—To a degree our sympathies go out to Representative Ferguson of Oklahoma who protests that the city is overrun with fish.

Out in Oklahoma a crab-cake is as rare as the great auk, and lobsters are kept in reserve only for the occasional easterner who tries to dumbfound the waiter by ordering a broiled one in the full expectation that it can't be had.

Just to make his point emphatic, Representative Ferguson arose in the house to read the menu of the house restaurant. It contained sea food dishes all up and down the list and under the head of "chef's suggestions" were more similar items, such as "broiled boneless bluefish, fried scallops, lump crab flakes, and sea-food patties."

"As a representative from a western state that produces beef," said Ferguson, "I want to take this opportunity to complain of this continual fish diet with the hope that beef and pork may sometime find a more prominent place at more reasonable prices on the menus."

Phooey On Terrapin.

The congressional record noted that "applause" greeted the remark. There must have been others in the house who had been pressed beyond endurance to eat sea food in quantity and great variety.

It is to be expected, since Chesapeake bay is only a few miles away, that sea food would be emphasized by chefs catering to a local industry. But to an untrained tongue there are varieties of sea food that to us seem overadvertised and, we have supporting testimony from other sources.

On our arrival here years ago, we were induced to eat Maryland terrapin.

To our untrained tongue, it tasted then like a boiled telephone directory seasoned with campfire charcoal. On several attempts since, despite efforts of patient waiters to flavor it up with sherry, it has always tasted that way.

There are varieties of sea food for which even the impatient Representative Ferguson would walk a mile, and we would accompany him. Terrapin is not among them. It is recorded that former Governor Landon came all the way from Kansas to Baltimore to eat Maryland terrapin and pronounced it good. But he subsequently lost the election.

Ferguson could be criticized for asking that pork be on the house menu more often, for indeed pork is always on the house menu and the members recently earmarked $600,000,000 of relief fund money to make certain it would stay there.

Yet when he complains that this supposedly all-American city goes in heavy for sea food, he is on safe ground. Only now we remember a restaurant slogan saying: "The fish you eat here today, slept last night in Chesapeake Bay."

To break even, let Mr. Ferguson sloganize his beef, perhaps in this manner: "The beef before you on this table, slept last night in an Oklahoma stable."

Old Prison Passes

By MAURICE MERRYFIELD
International Illustrated News Writer

NEW YORK, June 7—One of the historic landmarks of New York—a grim gray structure whose walls could tell many a lurid tale could they but speak—the old Tombs prison, is doomed.

Chief penal institution of the city for more than a century, a place which has housed a legion of notorious criminals, the forbidding and rather ugly prison is to give way to a modern $15,000,000 jail.

As the wreckers go about their work of razing the structure, they will be virtually demolishing a milestone in criminal history. With the passing of the old Tombs there comes to an end the old era, and with the dedication of the new prison will begin a modern and enlightened period of penal reform.

The colorful history of the gaunt old structure dates back to the days when Dutch colonists erected a scaffold in the section for the execution of criminals. At that time the actual site of the Tombs was a pond which was filled in about 1500 to make room for the expanding city.

Prison Started In 1832

Construction of the prison began in 1832 and was completed three years later. It was designed along the lines of Egyptian architecture but revisions and subsequent additions have so altered the original concept that it can hardly be described as an architectural gem.

Two of the most famous occupants of the Tombs were Harry K. Thaw and Edward Stokes. During the long and involved legal battle which ensued when Thaw was arrested for the slaying of Stanford White, prominent architect, the rich playboy of the day was housed there in comparative luxury, special privileges often being allowed to inmates in those days.

The heavy gates of the Tombs also clanged shut on Stokes when he was taken into custody for the sensational murder of James Fisk Jr., the railroad magnate, in a "love triangle" case which remains one of the most lurid in American criminal annals.

Several sensational escapes have been engineered from the old prison. A forged visitor's pass devised by one prisoner enabled him to walk out unmolested, much in the manner of the dwarf killer who escaped last year from Illinois state penitentiary at Joliet. Another inmate disguised himself as a woman and calmly boarded a street car in front of the main entrance to make his getaway.

Most of the prison was rebuilt about the turn of the century when the famous "Bridge of Sighs" was erected, linking the jail to the criminal courts building where the prisoners went to trial.

All this is now condemned, and with its passing, there ends another chapter of history, albeit one which is comparable with the train robberies of the James' gang and the lurid tales of the dime novel.

Today in Ohio History

William L. Simpson, born June 8, 1835, was a native of West Virginia and a member of Company F., Ohio National guard, during the Civil war. He was educated in Ohio schools and became a leading citizen of Guernsey county, which he represented in the 74th and 75th sessions of the Ohio legislature.

Simpson's popularity was shown by the fact that, although a Democrat, he was elected by a majority of more than 600 in a county normally Republican. He was reputedly the first Democrat in the county's history to be reelected.

Court Bill Goes Up for Sale

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 8—All that President Roosevelt's so-called revival of the supreme court issue amounts to is simply this:

Senate Leader Joe Robinson has been authorized to put the six-judge bill on the auction block in the senate cloak room and to sell it for the best possible compromise.

What he can get, if anything substantial, is debatable. Even staunch friends of the six-judge bill will whisper in your ear that they are licked by at least three or four votes. The opposition claims more, and seems to have more.

Tabled?

Neither side is inclined to argue much. The destination of the bill probably will be the senate "table," a legislative limbo where legislation is consigned in lieu of the waste basket. But if, in addition, some unobjected features of the program (creation of a supreme court proctor, enlargement of the lower courts, etc.) can be whipped into shape along with some corrections in supreme court procedure, the "compromise" may be passed.

That any new justices can be added to the court is extremely doubtful.

It just boils down to Mr. Roosevelt's desire to get "something" without tearing his party apart. It is only a question of salvaging (with the accent on the first syllable).

Lure

Those who are watching Robinson work in the cloak room note that he seems to be playing one point heavily. He is not unmindful of the vanity of some of the milder opposition senators who could use the personal credit of sponsoring an acceptable compromise.

The compromise must come from the opposition because it is in control of the situation, and the man whose name goes on the footnote in history. At least, the temptation for fame is a considerable factor and the opposition leaders are worried.

This angle casts the only doubt on the outcome.

Common Sense

The opposition is shouting threats of filibuster, but privately planning exactly opposite tactics. When and if the bill is called up, they will move to lay it on the table.

This parliamentary maneuver is perfect because the motion is not debatable. A vote must be taken on it immediately without any talk whatsoever. If the opposition has sufficient votes to put it over, that ends the whole business. The bill will be buried officially and finally.

Both sides want to avoid debate for an unquestionably good reason. Example: In Indiana, Minton is for, Van Nuys against; in Texas, Sheppard is for, Connally against; in South Carolina, Byrnes is for, Smith against. Debate would cut right down the middle of the Democratic party in these and other states, leaving needless bitterness from which the party might not be able to recover before the next congressional election.

The Way Out

A few of Mr. R.'s senatorial supporters are so convinced that tabling offers the best way out, they may develop a severe cold and confine themselves to bed when the vote comes.

Presidential pals at the Capitol feel Mr. R. waited too long before dickering for what he could get. His steam is gone. The court has outsmarted him by decisions which make court packing seem unnecessary, or else Mr. R. won a triumphant victory without packing, depending on the way you look at it.

However, congressional advisers have been unable to make Mr. R. see it that way. They have reason to believe he will go on the air shortly and tell the people that the Senate is preventing him from carrying on his program.

Pride-Test

The Germans are very secretive about it, but are making good use of their proving ground in Spain. They post sentries around everything German in the Franco army. Even members of Gen. Franco's staff are not permitted ready access.

But those who have penetrated the sentries have learned several interesting things. Example: German anti-aircraft guns have been proved most efficient, while the light German tank (about which the general staff was so proud) has been the biggest disappointment. This tank was found too light to withstand even infantry fire and was so speedy it outdistanced its own infantry, thus detaching itself from its support. The Germans, after finding this tank unsatisfactory, have developed a slower tank, with heavier armor, only to find it is almost a reproduction of the French tank.

Progress

That conference of house leaders with the President on the legislative program was significant mostly for what was not said. Court packing was mentioned only casually.

The farm bill and the sugar bill were not mentioned at all. The omission could hardly have been unintentional.

Leaders do not waste time with non-essentials when they lock the door and get down to real business.

Where Dancing Lacks Glamour

BY O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 8—To my notion the most sinister looking places in mid-town are those several-flights-up dime-a-dance halls that seem to survive every sudden sweep of the police broom. They carry on year after year in what seems from a casual view a depraved atmosphere.

To the casual passer-by no one seems to enter or depart. A seedy doorman lounges listlessly in the narrow entrance with apparently nothing to do but indulge an occasional yawn, talk now and then to a passing cop and sneak a few cigaret drags at the curb.

All the halls have the crepuscular light of dusk. The managers are the ferret-faced pick-thanks so often identified with gangster films. And the girls, perhaps a dozen, mostly pajama-clad, walk about the floor slowly with the few customers. Pale, indifferent, they seem to be interested mostly in the art of gum-chewing.

Nothing about the girls, the halls or the habitues offers the slightest touch of glamour usually to be associated with the glitter of a Broadway night. Yet for some mysterious reason these drab dives outlast the brilliantly lit and expensively orchestraed places.

In less sedate years Verne Porter and I used to take off in a vol de nuit for the dime-a-dance halls once a year just for the heck of it. We liked to look upon such excursions as a bit of slumming high jinks, but our nights on the loose came to an abrupt ending there. Invariably we suddenly decided to call it an evening and wandered home in the depths of a dolor. The majority of these girls—as did the most of us—came to the metropolis from the prairie towns, hugging their dreams that became nightmares of degradation.

Almost every person who has reached 40 or more has some friend of former days who has vanished without trace—and no record of his death can be found. My missing person is an artist, Clyde Von Maurr, who worked with me on ill-fated Hampton's magazine when I first came to New York. He was a handsome, lively fellow and something of a protege of Dan Sayre Groesbeck, the Chicago artist. At any rate, the magazine blew up and we planned some quixotic free lancing. Von Maurr went overseas the last year of the war, returned to New York after the armistice, and we had several evenings together before he left for Chicago and, so far as I was concerned, oblivion. I have never been able to get the slightest trace of him.

There was the story Don Allen used to tell of the passing of his father. Don was a jovial newspaperman who came out of the East to the middle west. He had an actor's flair for showy dress. Eventually he migrated to New York and became a film critic on the old Evening World. The one day after the Evening World was axed there came a report he had pistoled himself in a shabby rooming house in his home city, Boston. Anyway, Don used to tell of walking down a Chicago street one morning with his father, who had become manager of the old States restaurant. There was spring in the air and affection between them and their chatter was bantering and frothy. Suddenly the father stopped, stuck out his hand, and said "Son, I'm leaving you here. Good-bye." Then slumped to the sidewalk and the ambulance carried him away to the morgue.

Travelers say that one of the most thoroughly equipped hotels in America is in Wilmington, Delaware, and built with duPont dough. It includes such gadgets as a flash light in the room when mail arrives for a guest, automatic transom adjuster, and, of all things, running ice water in the baths. About the only thing it lacks is a dingus to slip on over-shoes without bending over. New York, however, is to top it with a 480-room hotel in the East 70's this fall. It will have all the Wilmington inn's equipment plus. For instance, if one wants to remain in bed in the morning there will be a drop desk over the bed-headboard upon which will be a device into which one may dictate letters and telegrams to waiting stenographers. Under the pillow will be a radio device that can not be heard by a sleeper in the same bed. Only the highest grade of patrons will be permitted to enjoy the many privileges.

Nazis Set for Radio Attack

Prepare To Use Air Wave for Propaganda Purposes.

This is the first in a series of three articles on the extensive preparations now under way in Germany to obtain control of the air waves and the methods employed to propagandize Nazism in all quarters of the world.

BY PIERRE J. HUSS
(Copyright by International News Service)

BERLIN, June 8—Nazi Germany has the loudest radio voice in the world and is doggedly determined to rule the air waves in the next war.

Day and night 12 high-powered shortwave transmitters are constantly pouring into the world's ear Hitler's words or pumping news and various kinds of propaganda across the globe.

Lonely outposts in India, Canada, Alaska and even the unsuspected backwoodsman in America's Switzerland get a daily or nightly dose of this never-tiring voice from the heart of Berlin.

Powerful Propaganda Weapon

Nazis claim that these are the most powerful shortwave transmitters in the world, thereby placing into Hitler's hands the most powerful and potential peace and war propaganda weapon ever devised by human beings.

If there was one lesson that Germany learned from the World war it was that of the golden value of propaganda, played with such effective and rewarding effect by the British and French in America. Long and careful study by German experts of the methods and value of world propaganda has convinced them that the Allies gained the upper hand in the end because of judicious use of all types of propaganda from the moment the war began.

It is held in fact, Germany lost the war partially because of its

Glancing Backward

TEN YEARS AGO.

It was Wednesday, June 8, 1927. Clarence Moore, 6, of Waterloo street died of injuries suffered when he was hit by an automobile.

Four citizens of Little Falls, Minn., home town of Charles A. Lindbergh enroute to Washington to join in the nation's welcome to the flier at Washington, stopped in Marion to place a wreath at the tomb of President and Mrs. Harding. They included the mayor of Little Falls, Austin L. Grimes and Kenneth T. Martin who were members of Lindbergh's graduating class at Little Falls High school in 1918.

Work was started on layout of new city street car line rails from Wood street to Center street on Davids street.

Miss Marybel Crow, student at Cornell university, arrived to spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. French Crow.

Theodore T. Zuck, student in the medical department of Western Reserve university, was here for a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zuck of Windsor street.

Robert E. Sifritt, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Sifritt of Delaware avenue, was one of four seniors at Ohio Wesleyan university awarded scholarships by the political science department for outstanding work during their college course.

Mrs. Anson Pickerel entertained at a bridge tea at her home on South Prospect street.

In honor of Rev. and Mrs. S. S. Hardy who had recently come here from Goodrich, Ontario, Rev. Hardy having accepted appointment as rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church here, 100 guests were received by officials of the church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Rapp.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

It was Friday, June 8, 1917.

General John J. Pershing, commander of the United States expeditionary forces in France, arrived in England accompanied by his staff. General Pershing's ship had been escorted through the danger zone by three United States destroyers. He was given an official welcome by Rear Admiral Sims, Lieut. General Sir William Pitcairn Campbell and the lord mayor of Liverpool.

The first regular American fighting force arrived on French soil. It comprised 100 expert and prospective naval aviators who were to cooperate with the French navy in meeting the submarine peril off the French coast and also aid the badly pressed American aviation section on the western front.

Field Marshal Haig, British commander in chief, reported that a victory of the first magnitude had been scored against the Germans in Belgium in opening of the new British offensive. He said the position captured south of Ypres "was one of the most important German strongholds on the western front."

A plan was being worked out by the women's committee of the Council of National Defense. Ohio division, to register all Ohio women for auxiliary war service.

When Dale Miller, a West Center street hardware merchant pursued a young man who had stolen several automatic revolvers from the store, the thief fired several shots at Miller and escaped.

Mrs. Clarence Flach was hostess to the Dii Penates club at her home on South Prospect street.

Your Health

BY DR. R. S. COPELAND

Bright's Disease.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE, nephritis as it is medically known, is a common affliction of mankind. It is in reality, an inflammation of the kidney. The disease may occur in childhood as well as in adult life. As a rule, it is much milder in children than in adults.

It has become a popular tradition to believe that Bright's disease is an incurable disorder. It is true it was once considered to be hopeless, but by the medical profession it is no longer regarded as necessarily incurable.

This form of inflammation in children is usually mild in its nature. Occasionally the infection may be severe and then it causes serious damage to the kidneys. For this reason, every measure must be taken to guard against this danger.

The disorder may follow a severe attack of sore throat, tonsilitis, ear infection or other infectious conditions. When it occurs as a complication of scarlet fever, great care must be exercised to prevent permanent and serious damage. It is important that the condition be recognized as early as possible.

At first the child may complain of nothing worse than a headache. But sooner or later fever and chills occur. He becomes easily irritated, is constantly cross and refuses to eat. In an acute case the fever is very high, perhaps reaching 104 or 105 degrees.

Occasionally the disease is overlooked or is confused with some other ailment. If there is the slightest doubt, it is well to have the urine examined. A microscopic examination will reveal pus cells and red blood cells, indicating some inflammation of the kidneys.

It is advised to make careful search for other centers of infection. The ear, throat, nose and glands should be examined for possible trouble.

The doctor will outline the necessary treatment. He will advise that the child be kept in bed and as quiet as possible. Copious amounts of water should be given. Alcohol sponges will help to lower the fever. The diet should be simple and nutritious, free from excesses of salt, pepper, pickles, spices and other conditions.

Careful check-ups of the urine must be made during the progress of the disease. If permanent damage to the kidneys has occurred, certain precautions must be taken. The child must be guarded against colds, infections and acute diseases. Adequate hours of rest and relaxation, with an abundance of fresh air and sunlight, are advised. Daily bowel evacuation will work off the kidneys by ridding the body of harmful substances.

LAWRENCE WRITES ON DEMOCRATIC DEFICIT

to autograph the books. Also the names of the corporations to which the books were sold have been made a matter of public record.

Just how Mr. Roosevelt justifies his frequent attacks on "economic royalists" and then permits the Democratic national committee, over which a member of his cabinet presides, to sell the book to the big corporations is something which will be hard to explain to the many liberals who have felt that, in the new deal, at last, they had an administration which was free from the kind of thing the old dealers used to practice. In his message to congress last week the President said about avoidance and evasion of federal tax laws:

"We hear too often from lawyers, as well as from their clients, the sentiment, 'It is all right to do it if you can get away with it.'"

Example Is Set

Unfortunately, that's what most law evaders and law avoiders think, and the spectacle of an administration permitting the federal corrupt practices act to be avoided by a device such as the sale of campaign books is just the kind which makes so many men in the business world consider that all they have to do at Washington is to pull the strings through lobbyists and almost any of their troubles can be adjusted. Unless the administration takes the initiative in setting up a disinterested set of special prosecutors to prove the offenses recited by minority leader Snell, it will be apparent that the Democratic national committee itself had legal advice that the method used was wholly within the "letter of the law." Indeed, it is rumored that, when corporation executives asked if the plan was not a violation of the law, they were assured it was not and that there would certainly be no difficulties.

President Roosevelt said to congress last week, "clever little schemes are not admirable when they undermine the foundations of society."

President Roosevelt said on January 20, 1937, on the east front of the capitol to the listening nation:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Under section three of article two, the Constitution outlines the duties of a president of the United States and says: "He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

The federal corrupt practices act is one of the laws of the United States and the charges by the minority leader of the house of representatives certainly raise the question of whether all the facts should not be put before a federal grand jury to determine whether indictments should or should not be rendered with respect to all persons who participated in the transactions.

GERMANY PREPARES FOR RADIO ATTACK

clumsy handling of such propaganda in outside countries, thereby sharpening the effect of the Allied origin. They believe, for example, that America was dragged into the war solely because of such propaganda and that the prize Allied slogan for American consumption was "Make the World Safe for Democracy."

Following that line of reasoning and encouraged by results already available from practical experience in radio broadcasting as far as public gullibility the world over goes, Nazi experts set to work a couple of years ago and made painstaking plans to win the next propaganda war by assuring themselves the monopoly of the world's radio war.

The 12 transmitters came gradually into action but that was not enough. As an extra ace to ease conflict suddenly seeks to isolate him from the world, Hitler has an additional ten of these all-powerful transmitters up his sleeve.

Emergency Transmitters

The last group, the existence of which is known to hardly anyone outside officials concerned, stands idle now. But in wartime they will be brought quickly into action and take their place in the front line of radio warfare to jam enemy broadcasts and make the air safe and clear for what Hitler and Germany as a whole has to say to the world through sister stations.

In other words, America is not going to get, as many believe it to have been the case in the last war, just one side of the picture. The argument over here is that this would be of advantage to America too for the simple reason that counter-propaganda by German enemies will not be able so easily to mislead the American public of

Out of Town Families Enjoy Shopping Here

Most Marion folks know our store—we are just a part of the family here in our home town. But out of town folks often are quite surprised—and delighted—to find a store with the large stocks we display and the special departments, like chinaware, glassware, gifts, draperies, etc.

We always say to out of town families, "If you cannot find just what you want in your own community, come to Schaffner's in Marion. We can show you larger displays, many unusual ideas for your home, and we will deliver your purchases free of charge.

"You may have the same liberal terms as Marion families, and, if you desire, your old furniture will be accepted as part payment on your new pieces. We welcome out of town customers, always."

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

BY ESTHER TYLER

(...1937, Esther Tyler)

SYNOPSIS: A mysterious shot ... Jane Bilnshops' old flame, ... the start of our stormy week-... of Farrington Bluff, home of ... Michael's aunts. A series of ... strange attacks occurs. Then we ... find the body of Michael's mad ... lover below the bluff. Aunt Mar-... tha's stool and Victorian ... is shot in ... the shoulder, and nearly ... clubbed with sleeping powders. The Skip-... per, Mike's tall, sweetly younger ... pal, disappears. Evidence piles ... up against Higgins, the old butler, ... and I reluctantly lock him in his ... room. Later I drag him the ... entire length in the "old loft" for ... the Skipper, Mike and I run for it.

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX
The Cedar Chest

I DIDN'T stop to find out what he ... was talking about. There was a ... noise behind us, but we ... the front stairs. At the ... Michael swerved to ... and sprinted once more ... servants' corridor. He ... the other hall before I ... from the stairs. By ... I reached the swinging ... a ladder-like set of ... straight down from ... directly in front of ... the back stairs.

"...," he panted. "Forgot ... light on my own knees showed me a gray film of dust coating my trousers.

But beyond that polished space and beyond the hodgepodge of our footmarks, a clear trail of footprints led off in the direction of the other end of the loft. There were two sets of them, blurred as if made by people walking either in stockinged feet or slippers. Michael's light flashed around in a circle. Not five feet away from that double trail was a single set—returning.

The Broken Vase

We painfully skirted trunks, old bureaus and washstands. Once we narrowly escaped disaster when Michael, banging into a cedar chest, dropped the light. The air the tension of his body where he crouched against me. But there wasn't a sound.

"Are there any lights, Mike?" I whispered.

"No."

It was like us to be without a light at that moment. I didn't have heart enough to swear. Michael was edging himself away from the trap into the darkness. He bumped into me as he went and I felt a bulge in his coat pocket—the bulge of William's flashlight.

"Mike!" I said. "You have the flashlight. In your coat!"

His hand slipped into the pocket. There was a grunt of relief and the next moment a beam of light gradually disclosed a section of the room we were in. It was low and directly under the rafters. The eaves sloped down to the floor and at its highest point it was not over five feet high.

If the old carriage loft brought to my mind the dust of other decades, this gave me a feeling of the dust of other centuries. It was full of Farrington relics. Furniture, clothes, mattresses, trunks, suit cases, chests, bedding. Apparently it ran over the outer section of the servants' quarters and had not been used in years. The atmosphere was musty and stifling.

Michael's light came slowly down to the floor at our feet. At the head of the trap door the floor was polished clean as a whistle by the clothes of persons coming up from below. The glancing of the light completely." He disappeared into blackness.

I followed him, barking my shins again as I went over the edge.

"Skipper!" he was calling. "Skipper! Skipper!"

In the darkness, there was no sound but our own heavy breathing. The air was dusty and heavy. Squatting on the edge of that trap door, I felt a sneeze coming, tried to muffle it, failed.

"Damn it," said Michael. "Shut up, can't you?"

He was listening. I could feel got thinner and mustier as we proceeded. It was dawning on me that we should have to work rapidly. There were no windows in that loft. If the Skipper was there, she had been there for hours.

"Mike! Mike! Where are you?" It was Guy from the direction of the trap door.

Michael shouted, "Go back! Stay with Aunt Martha. We'll be there in a minute."

A thick row of old draperies hung from the rafters. A pile of bolsters. I nearly yelled when I banged into an old hoop skirt. As we went along the chances of the Skipper's still being alive seemed to grow slimmer and slimmer. I tried to think what one did for a case of suffocation, but the only word that came to my mind was, "Dead—dead—dead!"

"Could a person live six hours in this?" I whispered to Michael.

His only answer was a grunt. Leading the way around a tall old mirror, he pulled up with a bang, his breath whistling into the silence. Over his shoulder I peered into the circle of our light.

The footprints had stopped. There was a blur of stirred up dust and a long trail of smooth, clean boards leading directly up to a heavy cedar chest. Right at our feet, scattering out as far as our light would reach, were the broken pieces of some horrible china contraption—probably a vase.

Before I had half taken in the situation Michael leapt forward. His head rapped smartly against a sloping rafter, and he staggered back, grunting. In another instant he was crouched and in under that eave. The chest was crashing out of the way, nearly upsetting me.

A Crusty, Dark Streak

The Skipper was lying on her side, her hands bound behind her with strips of white cloth and her ankles securely tied with similar pieces. A crusty, dark streak ran across her entire face.

Between us we managed to get her out into the open. Michael thrust a penknife in my hand.

"Cut the damn things. Cut them! Cut them!" He was weaving around me in circles; his voice clamorous.

I wasn't much more use. The knife twisted and turned in my hand and the cloth seemed to be made of iron. Dropping the useless blade, I tore madly at the knots. It went on and on. And Michael continued to bellow. Flinging down the final strip at last, I felt for the Skipper's heart. I couldn't hear a thing—only the mad pounding of my own pulse.

"Get out of the way!" I lifted the Skipper in my arms. "Hold the light, can't you? We've got to get her out of here."

He held it, after a fashion—unsteadily, wobbling back and forth in and out of my range of vision. We made but slow progress through that maze of relics. The Skipper was an unresisting dead weight in my arms, and it was necessary to bend almost double to avoid the rafters. I could hear Michael's breath now at my side, now in back of me. I nearly tripped a dozen times. My arms ached and I couldn't seem to breathe by the time the light of the trap door finally appeared.

The revolver takes another life, tomorrow.

Tents have been invented in France that can be erected on top of parked automobiles to form sleeping quarters.

In Ohio History

(From the J. H. Galbraith collection of Ohio histories, written for The Associated Press.)

HOOKER'S CORPS

The deepest impression of the Civil war was made at Xenia, O., by the passing of Gen. Joe Hooker's 20th army corps on its way from the Atlantic coast to reinforce General Rosecrans in the vicinity of Chattanooga.

There were about 30,000 men in the corps, which passed through southern Ohio enroute to Chattanooga. Xenia being a division point, the citizens felt that it was up to them to feed the soldiers when they passed through the town.

The whole population sprang into action and everyone was busy through the several days that the corps was passing. The women spent practically the entire time cooking. It was Xenia's offering of hospitality on the altar of patriotism.

DRIVER FINED $5

Eldon Cunning of Mansfield was arrested Saturday afternoon, near the east city limits of Marion on a charge of misuse of dealers' license plates by highway patrolmen from the Marion sub-station. He pleaded guilty at an arraignment before Justice of the Peace Melvin Strine at Waldo and was fined $5 and costs.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, June 9

THE AUGURIES for this day, both by lunar and mutual direction, are of a rather difficult nature to interpret, being conflicting and contradictory. There is danger of a stubborn obstacle, frustration or impediment, or an affliction, sorrow or bereavement that may have a tendency to arrest progress or cause the postponement of all activities outside of domestic life.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year notable for some stubborn obstacle, frustration or possibly an illness or bereavement that may cause postponements or cancellation of cherished plans. Feminine forces are involved, both as matters of anxiety and concern as well as helping and encouraging factors.

A child born on this day may possess certain talents and social graces but may be sensitive, introspective and not particularly ambitious or diligent.

The Portuguese government has assumed control of the importation, distribution and industrial application of mineral oils and their derivatives.
